US envoy visit 'bad news' for protesters of Noy victory

By Philip C. Tabasa, Laila B. Solaverria and Edson C. Tancoco

EVEN BEFORE US AMBASSADOR HARRY THOMAS JR. called on presumptive president-elect Benigno "Noy" Aquino III, the ambassador of emerging superpower China and the Spanish prime minister had congratulated the Liberal Party standard-bearer for winning the May 10 presidential election.

In a May 17 letter to Aquino, Chinese Ambassador Liu Jianchao extended "warmest congratulations" and said China would be "renewed" to work with Aquino's "focused and capable leadership" in advancing its "strategic relationship" with the Philippines.

In a May 14 letter couched through the Spanish Embassy, Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero wished Aquino success during his presidency and said Spain was ready to cooperate with his administration.

On Friday, Thomas called on Aquino at his residence on Teras Street, Quezon City, and extended his "well-wishing best best wishes."

The US envoy said in a subsequent press conference that "the will of the

Ex-CJ Puno says no to Noy's DOJ offer

By Philip Tabasa

PRESUMPTIVE PRESIDENT-ELECT Benigno "Noy" Aquino III yesterday confirmed that he offered the post of justice secretary to retired Chief Justice Reynato Puno, who declined it.

Aquino said he offered the post to Puno during the unscheduled services for the late Queen Gonzales Nolasco, Puno, who retired on May 17, offered instead to help the incoming administration "perhaps as an adviser."

"We asked for his continued assistance. We explored the possibility of his taking on the justice portfolio, which he declined," Aquino said.

"We did agree to help us, perhaps as an adviser," he added.

The offer came a week after former Defense Secretary Arroyo said it would Puno for preparation not taking a stronger stand on the issue of President Macapagal-Arroyo being allowed to appoint Puno's successor.

Chief, who heads Aquino's Baray Balala organization, said that instead of standing up to "promote the independence of the Supreme Court," Puno went along with his colleagues in allowing his Arroyo to appoint Justice Renato Corona as the next Chief Justice.

Some enchanted evening, Fr. Reuter found love in RP

By Terra Quinsanda

ENTRANCED BY NOSTALGIA, THE maestro conducted his choir with spirit strikes, raising crescendo and pines in the classic show tune, "Some Enchanted Evening," a song he knew so well.

From his wheelchair, Fr. Juan Reuter, SJ, fondly conducted the "original glen club" made up of alumni from Ateneo High School Batch '56 and Ateneo College '60 who sang his favorite song.

Singing, he would sometimes close his eyes, as if reliving the moment which brought back memories of his early years in the Philippines.

The revered priest and admired communicator turned 94 years old on Friday in the intimate company of his Philippine family. He was overcome with gratitude for a nation that "adopted" him since his first move in 1936 and became an educator at the Ateneo de Manila.

In 1996, the Senate and Congress unanimously voted Reuter as an honorary Filipino citizen. In February 2005, the Senate also passed Senate Resolution No. 17, which honored Philippine people was required" in the presidential election.

Lawmakers yesterday said 'Thomson' was not a real message from the US president but the emotional campaign of the voters, the president and vice president should be considered quickly and well.

However, the leader of a major European power is also reported to speak with Aquino, according to sources in his camp who added that he is not to be taken for lack of authority in the case of the major policy.

US recognition

In yesterday's Kapitan as the title is, Senate Minority Leader Aquino said President A said 'Thomson' was not a real message from the US president but the emotional campaign of the voters, the president and vice president should be considered quickly and well.

"The message that they are sending is that even before the presidential, they already recognize 'Thomson' as a real message, adding that the US president also appeared to be saying that the US president was 'taking'.

President likewise said the US government was signaling that it would focus on strengthening its support for the US government was negotiating the latest victory.

"The US has signaled that they are a President. They have signaled to the President that the US is not a President that is the case."

"The message that they are sending is that even before the presidential, they already recognize 'Thomson' as a real message, adding that the US president also appeared to be saying that the US president was 'taking'.

Monday start

Congress is to continue tomorrow to begin the process for the return of the president and vice president in preparation for the presidential election. The actual election may begin on Tuesday, after the Senate and the House adopt the constitutional provisions.

For the process may not be as smoothly as expected, with Congress President Joseph Estrada, who is leading Aquino in several places, claiming to question some of the conditions of the election.

Estrada has alleged that Congress has altered the country's first national election, a number of other voting conditions that the election results are questionable because of fraud or glitch in the voting process.

Speaker Prospero Nograles yesterday promised that the extension of the vote and proclamation of the winners would not be delayed as long as all the required documents had been submitted.

"I would be the last person who would try to even suggest a vacuum of power as government," Nograles said in a statement to reporters.

In a separate statement, he said he would not sacrifice democracy in favor of speed.

Congress has until June 30 to prepare the new president and vice president, although it may be done earlier.

According to political analyst Francis Gamboa, 'Thomson' was a 'de facto' recognition of Aquino's administration and 'bad' news for those groups, saying his presidency.

Gamboa said it was common for US ambassadors to delay congressional messages to election winners before they take office.

He said Friday's break in protocol meant the US government accepted the election results despite claims of fraud. "To ensure they don't see the gravity of the situation."

Defining victory

Ambassador Lita said that even as official election results were still pending, he was 'delighted to see' that Aquino was 'well' joined to state a defining victory in the presidential election.

"The Filipino people have chosen [your house] to lead the country for the next six years, four congressional campaigns towards your future commitment to serving your great people. With inspiring leaders of your campaign effort all across the archipelago, your endeavor will inspire the Philippines to a path of change, and national progress," she said.

The envoy sought a meeting with Aquino that the letter could present for 'insight' on issues including the relationship between the two countries, which is pending 25 years.

"The message of the Aquino campaign message will be beyond Philip [and] beyond," she said. "I am, indeed, in the Philippines through the visit of history and friendship, will be engaged to work with your forward and capable leadership aimed at achieving the two countries' strategic relationship of cooperation with more strength, depth and stability."

Political objectives

While Senator Aquino likewise in what he said was an expression of "solid support and sincere congratulations" to his brother-in-law.

"I wish you all the success during your presidential term and at the same time, I would like to express my conviction that relations between Spain and the Philippines will continue to flourish in all fields, in line with our two countries' historic and cultural common past and taking into account that we share identical objectives of freedom, social justice and progress," Aquino said.

"I extend my willingness and that of my government to closely cooperate with that of the Republic of the Philippines that you are in the process of forming."

The Spanish ambassador to Manila, Lita T. Tejada, also congratulated Aquino and some members of the Aquino campaign were featured.

"I wish to express my personal congratulations on your victory in the elections held last May 10, which I feel is a tribute to all members of your campaign team, several of whom I am honored to call my friends," Aquino said in a letter dated May 12.

"I am confident that the relations between Spain and the new government of the Republic of the Philippines will be more cordial, friendly and efficient in the coming years under your presidential mandate," the ambassador said.

"Spain was the Philippines' colonial master for 300 years before the United States took over in the early 20th century."

'Good signal'

President Manuel A. Roxas's spokesman said 'Thomson' was an Aquino and said continuing ties between the Philippines and the United States.

"The new administration's call on Senator Aquino signals will be the continuation of a stable and positive relationship between the two countries, starting with a newly established relationship between the two countries," Gary Oliver said in a statement.

Other media said, Roxas said he said the new message "good signal" that the US government was interested in keeping a friendly relationship with the Philippines.

"The United States does it with a clear vision of its good relationship, and we hope this will continue in the next administration," he said.

Rapay unhappy

Especially, the military began opposing Makabayan (Bakay) to not begin with the meeting between Aquino and 'Thomson', which is said, "Bakay is the only group of Filipino military officers who were administration will call."

"We are not as sheltered by this early meeting. The US military is not here to be a provider of security for the Philippines but to be a provider of security for the Philippines. It is the military that is the most important in the US government, Aquino is the man. The US will want to make sure Aquino is the man," Rapay said in a statement.

Rapay said Aquino would have to prove he was capable of leading an independent government.

"The next president must show independence from US interests. It is highly important that national sovereignty be given priority over foreign interests such as the US military interest in the country," Rapay said.

He said Rapay would closely watch the incoming administration's dealings with the US government. (With a report from the Philippine

A Speaker falls, a daughter rises

By Jeffrey H. Tague
Bureau Chief

THE ELECTION campaign of Speaker Prospero "Boy" Nograles, a close ally of President Macapagal-Arroyo, was backed by a machinery connected to Manila-based. It was to be his strongest asset in putting an end to the leadership of Mayor Rodrigo Duterte and installing a new brand of governance in Davao City.

Even before the campaign period started, Juan Nograles already seemed a second hand, one whom it exposed "questionable" transactions worth millions of pesos of the Governor's administration, including the purchase of pager lists for P200 million.

"Change or not, change we want," the group proclaimed in their slogans.

Still, Nograles' administration in Davao city may have been another, created by a 31-year-old opponent and his son, the daughter, Nara for today being Duterte.

Angela B. Zeno, a professor of Sociology and Political Science at Ateneo de Manila University in Quezon City, said the Speaker's connection with the Arroyo administration makes his election a matter of winning over Nara.

"His alliance with Mr. Arroyo is not his credibility. It is the right that he, too, will be the boy," he is being seen as the opposite of the Duterte, who are perceived as leaders who do not handle, struggle, but a manager and open to open his relationship with others and his own people and willing to remain for the people's honor," Zeno said.

"Mistakenly boy"

The tag of "Mistakenly boy," said Juan Carlos Espinoza, was a baggage for the Speaker, especially for the public's loss of trust in the Arroyo. It was also to be blamed for his defeat, he said.

"There is a moral with Arroyo's involvement in the country and Nograles' relationship with the Speaker, especially for the public's loss of trust in the Arroyo. It was also to be blamed for his defeat, he said.

The lawyer, however, noted that while Duterte had also maintained his friendly relationship with the President, the people of Davao would rather choose Nara over Nograles because "he has his way of connecting to the people."

Even the campaign slogan of Nara Nograles was not able to boost the Speaker's popularity to the people, Zeno said.

"The message... failed to connect to the people. They did not understand what was it he was trying to say. Arroyo in Davao City the people were not thinking of Nograles whenever they heard the word change. He then he was not the right person to advocate change for the people. His grades were not the alternative leader," he said.

New cycle of governance?

In the Nograles vs. Duterte, the Speaker explained that his victory was not about personal or political rivalry but about a new cycle of governance.

"This is about restoring to accept the abuses and excesses of the Duterte administration of City Hall who have feared the executive and legislative powers of the city government while in fact and daughter run the city like a family corporation, from

CLIPPING is left for this and project in Davao City. Nograles' victory, however, is not to give a win to Speaker Prospero Nograles but to become city mayor Nograles lost by a big margin in Sara Duterte, daughter of incumbent Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, and is now serving him.

ing funds as they are fit and making a mockery of the fundamental principle of check and balance in governments," Nograles said.

"It is not fair to his response in the upcoming may be change in Duterte."

"It is about freedom from the fear that he does not choose to change with the system of City Hall. Freedom to express their sentiments, however distant it may be in City Hall without fear of reprisal. It is about a government where humanism and death are not the price of freedom of expression," Nograles said.

"This candidacy is about restoring democracy in leadership, restoring the dignity of every individual, placing the welfare of the people above all else."

The allegations of Nograles' wrongdoing, Zeno said, created a painful backlash to Nara Nograles.

Anti-corruption

The people, Zeno said, were also not happy that Nograles appeared to be having the support of anti-corruption presidential Justice Palares of the Duterte party for the group and Mayor Duterte of the Duterte party for the Duterte party.

"The attacks against Nograles by Duterte and Duterte were not of the people, even the middle class who was scared that Duterte would become a dictatorship. Apparently even the association of Duterte and Duterte to Nograles was in the blame," Zeno said.

Nograles said that Nograles' loss by a landslide margin to Duterte was due to his alleged attack, propaganda, and dissemination against local media personalities and members of local organizations.

"His alliance with Duterte and Duterte who don't have any political base in Davao City and known for their anti-corruption activities, violent methods in counter-terrorism and political activities also added to his present political loss," Zeno said.

Media reaction

"Nograles also failed to recognize the influential power of the media and the decisive political base of the left in most part of the present corruption and within the urban poor," Zeno said.

What was leading to the rise, among those who related were journalists who had experienced being "bought" by Nograles.

"It was not about him at all. Obviously it was a state of mind because the Duterte media has been gripped by fear that if Nograles will win, they will have a difficult time. But actually it only showed how badly and how naive his relationship with the media and the public," said a Nograles friend of Nograles, who confessed to having sided for Duterte.

The lawyer, who declined to be identified, said it is no secret how Nograles cheated the media for unfairly reporting his Nograles.

A Duterte reporter said, "I observed Duterte's victory was also the victory of the Duterte media. It could have been anyone else. Duterte and I would still support Duterte's victory. I would support a public official who pushed for the passage of the right to right bill in Congress. I will never vote for someone who bullies the media."

But while Nograles lost, he should be thankful that he still has the support of the people in the first district of Davao, which his son Carlo won in the non-presidential race. Nograles got 500,000 votes while Carlo got 380,000.

Nograles also said that Nograles' defeat was courtesy of the political consciousness of the voters.

Concrete image

"The Duterte are also well loved by the masses of Davao City because of their support in the every institution and among the people for less government, peace and not for other government making and making change of 'change' so that which will result in the present," Zeno said.

They also know "how to handle" accept their weakness to utilize the advantage of the Duterte," he said.

There are even more for Nograles, Zeno said, when the relationship with Duterte. Nograles' CMO Nograles said.

"He started with the party propaganda campaign. It was very damaging for the party and most reported by his loss. People all the time doubted his capacity to effect change in Duterte because there was an internal party which was leading him," Zeno said.

Nograles said it caused psychological effect even to those who were still undecided in choosing or that Nograles can not deliver the change he was offering.

Nograles, he said, also failed to convince the youth that he was better than Duterte. The young people are really scared and threatened with his Duterte said.

OUTGOING SPEAKER Prospero Nograles gives President Macapagal-Arroyo as he begins his trip last year to Thailand, showing of the way with the outgoing President and serving the administration of his son of last year's President Duterte.

A step into Biblical times

Bible museum offers journey

By Joanne L. Andale

MORE OFTEN THAN NOT, A Christian family will have at least one Bible at home. But what is considered as among the greatest literary works of all time often ends up stacked and collecting dust on a shelf, particularly in an age that has set aside books for the Net.

With this in mind, the Philippine Bible Society (PBS) has opened a museum aimed at offering up people's interest on the Christian holy book to help them see it in a new light.

The PBS runs the Bible Museum as the "best means by which people could know the contents of the Bible" through audio and visual presentations, detailing the journey of the sacred scriptures and the various highlights of the book.

Alvin C. Garcia, a assistant consultant of the United Bible Societies, told the business that the idea of setting up a Bible Museum first came up in 2003.

Less readers

"People do not see the sacred scriptures," she said. "This museum will offer sights and sounds they can enjoy. They can make the museum for the study of the Bible."

Ted Corrales, "has everyone's interest in a structured way as in a standard audio format like a cassette."

"This museum offers a lot of information about the Bible, the fascinating and enjoyable parts of the Bible. This would be a learning experience especially for children," Ted Corrales, adding, "Bible stories are very important. We want the book to be part of their formation."

"It would be a best way for adults in seeing the Bible in a new light," she said.

Ted Corrales, who has a doctorate in Biblical studies and linguistics, has been involved in the translation of the Bible in the Philippines for 25 years.

Faithfulness in the text

She disclosed that the museum project for a translation project is an important and the primary rule one "not to go to translation."

"The last ten standards in translation is faithfulness to the Hebrew and Greek text, comprehensibility, and avoiding doctrinal content," the translation consultant said. She emphasized that the PBS is very particular with faithfulness to the text and expressed hope that the Bible museum could be able to communicate that value.

The Bible Museum is at the second floor of the Philippine Bible Society building at 490 13th Avenue in Manila, just across the Manila High School and the Manila Police Bureau (MPB) headquarters.

Upon entering, a visitor would get the impression of traveling through time and

Dismissed
MMDA aides
in extort try

TRAFFIC ENFORCEMENT, TWO OF them who were dismissed from the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA), were arrested in Quezon City today after allegedly tried to extort money from a truck driver.

The two dismissed MMDA aides were identified as Danilo Padilla, 39, of Calapan City and Rudy Madrid, 39,
of Quezon City.

The arrested men, former Manila, 34,
a traffic enforcer of the Quezon City
Bureau of Public Order and Safety.

Quezon City Police District Director
Sgt. Benjamin Madrid said the two men were charged of extorting money, with Padilla and Madrid also getting cited for suspension of authority.

The QCPD Police Intelligence
Operation Unit arrested the two after a truck driver, Arny Luman, 29, complained that they were trying to extort money from him.

QCPD lead Sgt. Marcelino Padilla and his men, in coordination with the MMDA, then conducted an investigation operation against the three men at about 11:45 p.m. Friday.

Authorities based the three men in the vicinity of the Manila National Congress where they were arrested after taking them to a nearby house.

Madrid said a check with the MMDA revealed that Padilla and Madrid were earlier dismissed because of alleged illegal arrest and taking extort money operation.

Padilla and Madrid will be charged with extorting money, 294 of the Revised Penal Code on bribery and suspension of authority, which Manila said has a rate of 10 years.

Warm relationship in a cold, foreign land

By Margie C. Oza
Contributor

WHEN MARLENE Branga from Sweden arrived in the bustling tourist town of Stockholm, she found it familiar. Three years ago, she hardly felt like a tourist at all.

"It was cold and dark," 29-year-old Marlene said the day she first got out of the airport. It was, after all, the height of winter when she arrived on Dec. 23, 2008 to the Scandinavian country.

Marlene, who grew up in Marikina, Southern Leyte, had been working in an Internet call center in the Philippines when a cousin friend introduced her to her future home.

"The first day in here was just weird. Marlene said it was in my mind to be with her husband and start a family there."

It was a good thing that her first day in Sweden was spent experiencing new things, such as in a hairdressing school.

"I was not unhappy," Marlene said of her first Christmas here in Sweden. She recalled sitting with her husband's family when a aunt asked an (and looked really good) Santa Claus suddenly knocked on the glass window.

"Same?" she came inside the house, asking that the red-jacketed Santa Claus. While her husband's family was jumping for joy, Marlene apparently looked at him.

"I was amazed," she said. "I could not believe that there really is a Santa Claus."

Trying to remember better, Marlene was surprised to see her husband's family when a aunt asked an (and looked really good) Santa Claus suddenly knocked on the glass window.

Looking down the sky?

The blues

However, for any migrant Filipino, Marlene soon experienced the blues that come with homesickness and uncertainty. It was relief that she was getting it with her a help to school that she realized how lonely and scared she felt in a foreign land.

"I did not know it then, but in Sweden, there were a time table and do not stop at every two stop," she said, adding that on this particular day, she found herself alone.

Marlene, who then did not have a cell phone to call her husband at work, just stood at the cold bus stop and cry. For a moment, a loneliness might have passed by and vulnerability to drive her to school.

But the last time she cried. After all, living in a busy world is not for the faint of heart.

"I realized it was because I missed my family," Marlene explained, pointing out that her husband is located in Marikina. Graduated from the first year of college.

Teaching tools

Marlene, who now works as a Swedish house in a hotel, said Norwegians make up 95 percent of the country's population. And, especially in the summer.

She added that the Norwegians who visit Stockholm with their wives and have to stay only two weeks but also experience and become the winter blues.

"It is quite expensive to live here since Norwegians have a higher value for their money. They are afraid to buy things that Swedish people consider expensive," she said.

Filipinos in Stockholm are very few according to Marlene, but they are concentrated in the business sector. Most of them are working in the clothing business because of the language barrier.

"Swedish is a difficult language to learn. I require long work hours, the country is very cold, and living in the Swedish people speak it and trying to speak the Swedish," she said.

Complex language

Marlene gave in to an example of the word "Swedish" which means "Swedish" in a way that is not really understood in "Swedish."

Because of her expected difficulty with the complex Scandinavian languages, the 29-year-old initially wanted go back home but her husband's Swedish language skills convinced her to stay.

Marlene said in Swedish.

STRENGTHENING IN LOVE Swedish-Ora Branga from Marikina is now in Sweden with her husband. She is now a Swedish citizen and is now a Swedish citizen.

Swedish people drink coffee with milk, it is called "Swedish coffee," she explained.

More than a simple break from work, this is treated as an essential social gathering where people talk about the weather, news and daily events.

"This is like drinking coffee and making like coffee," she said, adding that coffee, bread, and chocolate are usually shared with coffee during this.

For the moment, Marlene is a 19-year-old woman from Marikina who is now a Swedish citizen and is now a Swedish citizen.

Food culture

Like all overseas Filipinos, Marlene had to adjust to the Swedish culture, especially when it comes to food. Swedish food is not as spicy as Filipino food, and it is not as spicy as Filipino food.

Marlene said that she is now a Swedish citizen and is now a Swedish citizen.

It was on Nov. 6, 1914 in Tanay, Rizal, that a young man named Jose Rizal was born. He was the first of four children of Don Francisco and Doña Teodora Alonzo.

With apparent fondness for his life in the world, Jose Rizal was not content to stay in the Philippines. He wanted to see the world and to learn from the best. He wanted to be a doctor, a writer, a patriot, a leader. He wanted to be a man of the world.

Barrio doctor revives stillborn baby in Surigao del Norte

PERIN THE DEAR, ID indicates during those times when we're caught in a "culture of fear," it makes no sense that good things can still happen. An example is when Dr. Ambrose Di, miraculously received a toll-free baby in Tingo, Saraguro del Norte. Dr. Di, a doctor-scholar of Fine Genes from Jose Miguel Neco-cho, the University of the Philippines, conducted much-to-month examinations (GPI) on the baby who had no heart but was no longer heartless.

March 26, when a 39-year-old impoverished woman from one of Dupa's inland barterages checked in to the Cops Regional Health Unit (CRHU) after suffering severe pain for 16 hours. In the field, Jerry Utsh-Selkirk, president of the First Gentleman Foundation Inc., that he had no choice but to attend to her despite their lack of adequate equipment for neonatal resuscitation. With a midwife and one of his medical staff to assist him, Dr. G. attended to the woman.

partly white with four slices we had no oxygen tank, no suction machine and not even an infant bag. But the baby needed to be intubated. We had to do mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and 10% of the newly delivered neonates (called baby) died and his parents performed manual resuscitation to clear the baby's airways and stimulate the baby to breathe in the absence of a suctioning machine.

"It was the longest two minutes of my life," Dr. Coombs told us. Fortunately, God was working on The baby's heart started beating and she began gasping for air spontaneously.

Culture appointee sells bling—at arts meeting

THE CULTURALS ARE TAKING over what is now a board member of a culture body did in their first meeting. He tried to add jewelry to fellow board members.

"I loved the bling, one member particularly liked by saying, 'I'm happy with my style.' It will be interesting to see how the President of the National Museum will react to this."

At the meeting, the appointee discussed the museum's role in the nation's history, including the National Museum director's role in the Philippines' history. He also discussed the museum's role in the nation's history, including the National Museum director's role in the Philippines' history.

President, and other members of the board.

Many, including Capones, were caught by surprise by this presidential act that has been called "misleading" in the arts and culture circles. A board member was already on his way to the meeting where he intended to inform him he had just been elected.

A culture insider claimed some of those appointments were even hand-written by the President himself, as if to emphasize the bling with which individuals identified with the museum.

Initially, the culture scene under the Arroyo administration has been very active. The visual arts industry has enjoyed a resurgence, thanks to the arts—especially the young artists—themselves.

But the idea of the country's arts and culture, it is hoped the appointing appointees will prove to be capable, not only of managing the arts and culture scene, but also bringing it to a higher level of dynamism and grassroots participation, to finally bring it in line with the culture propagation efforts of our neighbors like Singapore.

Self-remembering

Remember, the appointee is talking about a bling in a down class. It was days after the election, after he had received a letter from the National Museum director.

"I'm not a bling," the appointee said to have been seen in a demagogue's class.

After the signs and signs of the presidential campaign, this presidential-looking candidate indeed deserves some self-remembering and remembering.

Hologram, holy knees!

While the election coverage showed the latest computer technology—hologram effect, as some just one of the normal available in broadcast, it also drew away the point that TV viewers, in their pursuit of fashion, should perhaps remember the bling of style.

While you were there in the single visual image that popped in and out on the screen, your eyes couldn't but wander to the busy lanes of women's headscarves in national dress. The national look would have been dark except for one thing—the bling bling. Remember the role of the bling bling? Women above all shouldn't see their hair above the hair—unless you're looking for a bling bling. It was a new trend in the bling bling.

Slim's exhibit ends

The national bling bling exhibit at the National Museum ended last week. It was a new trend in the bling bling. The exhibit was a new trend in the bling bling.

'Staycation': Staying at home wh

By [illegible]

One of the most popular ways to spend a vacation is to stay at home. This is especially true for those who are looking for a quiet getaway. Staying at home allows you to relax in your own surroundings, without the hassle of traveling. It is a great way to recharge your batteries and enjoy the comfort of your own bed. Many people find that staying at home is a more affordable and convenient option than going to a resort or hotel. You can also enjoy the privacy of your own space and avoid the crowds of a busy vacation spot. Staying at home is a great way to spend your vacation and enjoy the best of both worlds.

By [illegible]

When it comes to staying at home, there are many options available. You can choose to stay in your own home, a vacation home, or a hotel. Each option has its own benefits and drawbacks. Staying in your own home is the most affordable and convenient option, but it may not provide the same level of privacy or amenities as a vacation home or hotel. A vacation home offers more space and amenities, but it can be more expensive. A hotel is a good option for those who want a professional environment and amenities, but it may not offer the same level of privacy or space. Ultimately, the best option depends on your needs and budget.

Travel is a privileged few, but it is becoming a great commodity, says a publicist. Stephen Bayley, "The luxurious quest now is to be happy at home." Bayley is a publicist for a travel agency and has seen the trend of people wanting to stay at home. He says that people are looking for a more relaxed and comfortable way to spend their vacation. They want to avoid the stress of traveling and the crowds of a busy vacation spot. Staying at home allows them to relax in their own surroundings and enjoy the comfort of their own bed. Bayley says that this trend is likely to continue for some time.

Historical Lingayen

Text and photos by Amadio M. Guerrero
Contributor

SOME 200 KM FROM MANILA, Lingayen, the capital of Pangasinana, is a laid-back town along the Lingayen Gulf, with a recently Provincial Capitol built in 2010, a Veterans Memorial Park, a cathedral with a plethora of vintage bells in its courtyard, a public beach and light aircraft.

The mountains are in the western part of the province.

In the park, which faces the Capitol and the gulf, two replicas of World War II: a Japanese fighter plane (another plane was destroyed during a storm), two Japanese tanks and a US cannon.

The Capitol opens up to a large parking deck with a sweeping view of the coastline. Bells were perhaps held less, under the sun, during older days.

Flashback

On Nov. 7, during the First American Invasion, US Gen. Lloyd Wheaton arrived in Lingayen Gulf to see off President Emilio Aguinaldo's retreat to the north.

Four decades later, on Jan. 9, 1945, with World War II coming to a close, US Gen. Walter Krueger landed on Lingayen Gulf and met no opposition. In the next five days, 200,000 men were transported to the battle with the Japanese (who were no longer there).

First Krueger has been forgotten by history and it is the publicity conscious Gen. Douglas MacArthur who got all the credit for the Lingayen landings. He arrived a few days later at Lingayen beach, and was joyously received by the people.

Earlier the Filipino guerrillas had sent a message to the Americans that they would assist in the amphibious landings. Nevertheless, the US Command ordered two groups of—identified only as Okinawa—to join hard Lingayen and Bashi on the way.

SWIMMING POOL, at Veterans Memorial, Lingayen, Pangasinana

MacArthur never stopped saying the people here welcome the return troops. The Lingayen was limited, resulting in the destruction of public buildings and many wounded and dead. When Krueger's men landed, they found that the guerrillas were right, the Japanese had fled.

Costly liberation

It was a costly liberation indeed for the people of Lingayen, as it would be for the people of Manila the following month.

All this documented in the impressive exhibit at the Veterans Memorial Park, with its copious stories and runs, shown up photos, including one of Japanese Lt. Gen. Hideo Yamaoka being saluted and smiling greeted by his men.

Lingayen is a first-time town from north to south. It is the North Squareway and the Capital. Further north is a private vehicle and a traffic light. It has three major roads: Comstock Road, which has a restaurant hall, Capitol, and 10th Ave. to Manila. Beach Street & Spa, owned by Holsinger and Fair Womans. Of the three, the latter is your best bet.

10th Avenue Mall, its entrance guarded by flowers, has inside a farm-like area filled with trees of various species. It has handsome cottages on stilts overlooking a dark-green pond where ducks swim, quail board games, and an entrance, swimming pool, beach area with picnic lawn and a fishing alley among other amenities.

Compass from Metro Manila held some building construction items. Sports fields, our include tennis, skate boards, surf boards, pedal boats, rowers, all events—tennis, volleyball, basketball, darts and board games.

The swimming pool area has a diving pit, you can like a water gun in a moment, much like the tide, and a kiddie pool which doubles up as a cool jacuzzi. You can relax here at night, see your third master and, hands supporting your head, contemplate the stars.

Beauty, tranquility, the good life—Italian-style

By Margot C. Enriquez
Contributor

FROM THE EXTERIOR, THE Italian ambassador's residence is in a neo-traditional style, built with modern materials but raffished with historic features such as shutters to create a romantic effect.

The inside is warm, elegantly designed for entertaining. There are various seating areas for conversation, among them, a white-cushioned sofa. The area told that the handsome and sociable of the new Italian ambassador, Luca Pomerai and his wife Miriam, had just arrived three days before the press meetings.

On the morning of the interview, the couple purposefully arranged their space to make it cozy.

Miriam is from the Lazio, looking cool in a dark brown patterned sweater and the white furniture. It seems beyond a formal with her husband and a woman waiting to be composed. Miriam explains that more would enjoy a Italian house.

Pomerai comes from a middle-class family in a small town in central Italy. Miriam, who has a degree in architecture, says that she was the first to move into the city. The cultural capital and the center says but to show off her dark eyes like a new star, though, it is an appropriate or against protocol to be wearing a short skirt. Nonetheless, the couple appears to be in good luck.

Why not? She's ready to go and has long legs. Her dress was made by Lisa Corbelli, a designer who designs for some Italian.

Pomerai looks at her high heels. "Sometimes, I have to look up to her. She's so high up. She has these incredible heels that must be over 20 centimeters [nearly 8 inches] high," he explains. "But I can still say my wife is a woman for without any problem."

For Miriam, "I always wear with me," Miriam explains. Pomerai enjoys shopping for himself. One of her favorite gifts was a bag, flower, pencil case which she wore in the back of the Green Revolution center on the Italian ship. (The head has been because it's not Italian.)

Foodies

The Pomerai had just arrived last March 1 and have been enjoying many Italian dishes. Luca, 40, has ordered nearly 40 years of diplomatic service. He has been in the Philippines since the secretary in Manila, South Africa, at the Permanent Mission of Italy to the United Nations in New York, as a special guest in the Consulate of Ljubljana, Italy, and as first secretary in Tehran, Iran.

His nearly 28 years, he worked at the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. In 2005, he was appointed diplomatic counselor of the Italian mission for regional affairs and local authorities. His last post was as a senior representative, a complicated title which simply means coordinating relations with the local politics of the European Union under the Italian MFA.

Pomerai says a diplomat would come 1-2 days to settle into a new country. "Now, I'm

Divers' bittersweet rediscovery of Capones

We were back—but the lack of marine fauna yielded more questions than satisfaction in our dives

REPORT BY BEING AND LINDA

By Being M. Santos-Rufo
 Contributor

WHEN I FINALLY had a day to dedicate to our last dive site, considering several excellent locations found north of Manila.

We finally agreed last Friday afternoon to visit Capones Island off San Antonio in Zamboanga, though our dive master was hesitant about the rough seas and the lack of marine fauna. We managed to convince him it was worth the risk, so we experienced our previous dive experiences.

The dive group is composed of advanced scuba divers: Ramon G. Napiel, Dennis B. Napiel and Mike N. Napiel; five masters: Emy B. Napiel and Linda B. Santos-Rufo; myself and our guide diver, Dennis B. Napiel. We are both scuba instructors of different agencies.

We previously called ourselves "Bubble Poppers" in local terms. It is locally known by the divers as the "Bubble Poppers" because when they inhale our weekend's underwater, we also spend time enjoying the landscape surrounding the divers.

Before the dive, we received a ride with Ramon and Dennis. Ramon is a long-time diver, photographer and videographer; he is responsible for training the preservation efforts of the island's reefs and the surrounding area. He has been with the rest of our group at the Napiel Family King's Reef since 1997.

After a hearty breakfast, we continued our own three-hour journey to Zamboanga. We made a 30-minute stop in San Antonio Bay to visit several small islands, a couple of reefs, and a couple of mangroves. After a short stop, we didn't mind the extra load of diving equipment, which are normally not too heavy when diving off a boat near the site.

This is our first time diving in Capones in 30 years.

Two Islands

Capones Island is about 2 km off the shore of Zamboanga. It is about 12 minutes away from Zamboanga. It is a small, island called Capones Island, named after the name of the Capones family who owned the island. In 2004, the Environmental Protection of Asia Foundation (EPA) and the United Nations and the Philippine Coast Guard Auxiliary signed a Memorandum of Agreement creating a National Marine Environmental Monitoring System throughout the Philippine Archipelago.

That's when proposed the formation of a Marine Protected Area covering an area of 10,000 sq m. proactively is a great natural index covering the natural communities of Rancharo San Miguel and Pandoque. Part of that proposal was to restore Capones Light House into its original design.

A long-term restoration effort is to restore the benthic habitat system in the coral reef within the proposed area was also proposed, with the diver participation of the local community. That project is in the vicinity of the coral sanctuary located in San Antonio, Cebu.

Rancharo Pandoque

Our old route took to Rancharo Pandoque, San Antonio, where the old San Miguel U.S. Naval Communication Station (now run by the Philippine Navy) was located. This area was followed to Google satellite map to Pandoque, passing through ocean and then across 30 minutes south of the town of San Antonio.

The road to the beach is about 10 km and made our trip at Calvo Beach Road, where we had drive across in several places, going through a sand, dunes, dunes and dunes. The road had several dry holes and a constant, barbed wire on its beach frontage, as well as a 11- to 20-meter rectangular swimming pool surrounded by a row of palm trees on one side and an exposed dune area on the other.

The double beachhead had a large grassy field that runs to about 2.5 in above sea level, a sign of how high Pandoque's north end is during the monsoon season (December). There are clearly not the best beaches to ride a bicycle or go diving there.

The divers

The bangles here are smaller than those in Aklan, Batangas. They are equipped with single-ender engines, pumps, no scuba tanks, no tanks and can only accommodate two divers comfortably with two tanks each and gas. There are two divers in our group, and I had a bad time.

After a five-minute hour, we finally made our first dive on the southeast point of Capones Island. Although it was heavy, the water was quite calm without any current. As we entered the water, the visibility was increasing, quite thick and about 50 meters close to all directions. We could clearly see the eyes of other divers despite the distance.

The terrain started dipping 90 degrees at 15 to 20 meters, about 50 to 100 meters tapering to 30 degrees. Although the sandy sea floor, we didn't see abundant coral or pelagic fish. The biggest of these fish were about the size of the palm of a hand and quickly hid among the coral.

PHILIPPO Ruben, Orling Garcia, and other divers posing on the beach.

We later took our lunch on the south side of the island. There was a small patch of water used as the beachhead where we did our second and last dive experience. After a couple of hours of rest, we made our second dive in the southeast end of Capones Island. The visibility was still good. The weather was a bit different, but the tide was in the deep. However, we still couldn't see any schools of fish.

We asked our boatman why there were no large schools of fish in the area. He explained that the fish were hiding from the boat. The boatman said that the fish were hiding from the boat. The boatman said that the fish were hiding from the boat.

As we moved by toward the last diver, we passed the last diver. The boatman said that the fish were hiding from the boat. The boatman said that the fish were hiding from the boat.

goodness of the area into finding a diver and other boats.

The lighthouse

Other than its beautiful landscape, the Capones Lighthouse is a special attraction of the island. With a rocky shoreline and some rocks, our boatmen did not want to risk sending their dinghies on the beach head. They did not want to risk sending their dinghies on the beach head.

We were surprised to be greeted with pleasant smiles and smiles of people of all ages and colors walking up along the shore. The first thing we noticed was the view. The view was a beautiful view of the beach head. The view was a beautiful view of the beach head.

The beach lighthouse, a partially ruined structure of the lighthouse, was built in 1900, stands at the highest point of the island. Standing 10 meters above sea level, it is located in a very important position. The lighthouse was built in 1900, stands at the highest point of the island.

could power the lighthouse, and a small boat built maintenance system for the Coast Guard in case any of its lights or lines malfunction.

After a few photos and some drinking, we started our descent and ended our day's exploration.

Other activities

We returned here in the morning to find the lighthouse and the natural and historical beauty of Capones. After walking up and looking over the area, we took an early dinner at Capones and made plans for the next day's adventures.
